JIM MYERS NAMED BUCKINGHAM ASSET MANAGEMENT'S DIRECTOR OF TRAINING AND DEVELOPMENT

(St. Louis — August 30, 2011)

Jim Myers has been named director of training and development at Buckingham Asset Management. He will be responsible for coordinating the training programs for the firm's advisors and support staff.

"Jim has always shown a tremendous willingness and ability to step up and not only fill, but thrive in roles vital to helping our firm grow and continue to do the right thing for our clients," said Adam Birenbaum, Buckingham's chief executive officer. "His new role will be no different, as he will no doubt help provide us with the training we need to do our best to simplify our clients' financial lives. His background in consulting and the work he has done here as an advisor will truly help set our training and development program apart."

In addition to his duties with Buckingham, Jim will also coordinate training efforts for Buckingham's sister firm, BAM Advisor Services, which serves more than 120 Registered Investment Advisor firms across the country. These sessions involve a wide range of offerings from compliance and fixed income to effective ways to market to and serve clients.

Jim has a bachelor's degree from Truman State University in Kirksville, Mo. Jim continues to serve as a Buckingham wealth advisor.
